PREFACE

Delivery of vital human services to qualified needy Hoosiers, both young and old, within the legal extent of the law, is the overriding mission of Indiana's public welfare system. Furthermore, the maintenance of fiscal responsibility and accountability while acting on behalf of all Hoosiers is recognized as a requirement which must be met as a condition for the continued availability of the many important programs which are at the heart of the state's public welfare system.

Personnel of the State Department of Public Welfare, and the 92 local Departments of Public Welfare, are proud of their achievements in bringing meaningful assistance to those in need of help, while at the same time protecting the role of the Hoosier taxpayer in paying for governmental services. Hoosiers can feel confident that Indiana's welfare system relies upon effective and efficient management controls while remaining constructively and positively responsive to people's needs. As a result, it is apparent that no state has achieved a comparable overall standard of excellence.

This Graphic Overview of Indiana's Public Welfare System for Fiscal Year ending June 30, 1982 outlines, in table and graph form, several of the many activities and achievements conducted during this most recent state fiscal year. Care has been taken to present an accurate, understandable picture of the present and historical position of Public Welfare in Indiana.

I, along with the 92 local directors, am pleased to report that Indiana continues to be nationally recognized in the administration of AFDC, Medicaid, Food Stamps, Child Support and Child Welfare activities. Indiana's public welfare system has responded to the increasing demands placed on the availability of Child Welfare services by the Juvenile Code, and the state's Crippled Children's program is helping parents and children in easing awesome medical and financial burdens. In all such programs, administrative procedures are constantly being reviewed and revised to use Hoosier taxpayer dollars effectively and efficiently, while at the same time providing the most meaningful kind of help possible.

A summary record of these accomplishments is contained in this report in order to bring to Indiana's citizens a concise picture of the activities of one of Indiana's most costly programs. On behalf of myself and my colleagues at the local level, it is a pleasure to make such a report available.
